

About ACP

ACP represents the internal medicine community united by a commitment to excellence.

The American College of Physicians (ACP) is the largest medical specialty organization in the United States, representing 163,000 internal medicine physicians, related subspecialists, and medical students, with members in every state and over 172 countries worldwide.

We're a diverse, global community of internal medicine specialists and subspecialists united by a commitment to excellence. ACP and its members lead the profession in education, standard-setting, and the sharing of knowledge to advance the science and practice of internal medicine. ACP advocates on behalf of internal medicine physicians and their patients for policies that will improve health care and patient outcomes.

Internal medicine physicians are the cornerstone of comprehensive health care.

Internal Medicine Physicians are Leaders, Experts, Connectors, and Detectors

Internal medicine physicians are the foundation of clinical care. They serve as trusted primary care physicians and other subspecialists who guide patients through complex health needs and fill diverse roles across both public and private sectors. They optimize patient care; lead teams of medical professionals; and hold leadership positions within clinical, business, technology, and government settings.

Internal medicine physicians are experts in complexity who apply scientific knowledge and clinical expertise to the diagnosis, treatment, and compassionate care of adults throughout their health care journey. Their expertise and knowledge provide a vital foundation for patients, medical professionals, and the health care system every day.
